

THE ASSASSIN.

Information Made Against the Anarchist, Bergman.

Two for Assaulting Mr. Frick, One for an Attempt Upon the Life

Of Vice-Chairman Leishman—Bail Fixed at $5,000 Each for the Assaults and $1,000 in Each of the Other Charges; $14,000 in All.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 26.—Alexander Bergman, the anarchist, who attempted to assassinate H. C. Frick, on Saturday, will not be permitted to escape with the punishment of seven years in prison provided for a single case of felonious assault. Six informations were made against him Monday evening, charging him with offenses under which he can receive sentences aggregating thirty-three years in the penitentiary. The formal informations were made before Alderman James McMaisters, by Secretary Lovejoy, of the Carnegie Steel Co., Limited, at 6 o'clock Monday evening. Three are for felonious assault and three for entering a building for the purpose of committing a felonious assault.

Two of the informations are for assaulting Frick and one for the attempt upon the life of Vice-Chairman Leishman, who was in the office with Mr. Frick at the time. The other three charges are alike, except that it is alleged that the offenses were committed on separate dates, the dates named being July 5, 22 and 23. Alderman McMaisters immediately made out warrants and placed them in the hands of Constable Webber, who went through the form of presenting them at the jail. The alderman fixed next Saturday as the time for holding the preliminary hearings. Bail was fixed at $5,000 in each of the cases for assaulting Chairman Frick and $1,000 in each of the other four charges, making $14,000 in all.

The extreme penalty for felonious assault is seven years and for entering a building with felonious intent four years. If he gets the limit he will have thirty-three years in the penitentiary in which to study upon his vicious theories of nihilism and anarchy. The charge of carrying concealed weapons, upon which another year could be added, may also be preferred. Warden McAlees is taking extra precautions to prevent Bergman harming himself or his fellow-prisoners, or attempting to escape. While he does not consider that there is any danger, he says it was deemed advisable to watch the accused closely, as "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

A wild rumor was in circulation during the day that several friends of Bergman arrived in Pittsburgh from Chicago, Sunday night, armed with dynamite bombs and cartridges, and that an attempt would be made to pass some of the explosives in to the prisoner. The jail authorities do not take much stock in the story, but will be very careful to allow no one in to see him who is not known.

Fell Into a Tank.
LOUISVILLE, July 26.—Adam Fuchs, employed at the Kentucky Woolen mills, met with a horrible accident Monday. He was walking across a tank of boiling water, when he slipped in. The water only reached about midway of his body, but the part below the surface was almost literally boiled from his bones. The unfortunate man shrieked with agony, but retained sufficient presence of mind to wade to the rim of the vat, and was lifted out, leaving great flakes of flesh in the seething water. Physicians say he will die.

Killed His Child With Whisky.
GALLIPOLIS, O., July 26.—Jacob Jones, 35 years old, and residing at Patriot, this county, came home Friday night intoxicated. He took a pint of strong whisky from his pocket, caught his 4-year-old son and poured the contents of the bottle down the little boy's throat. The little one lingered until 3 o'clock Monday morning when he died in terrible agony. This inhuman crime has caused considerable consternation.

Over a Cliff.
WHEELING, W. Va., July 26.—James Pilens, a prominent citizen, and his wife, mother-in-law and four children, were thrown seventy-five feet over a cliff into the Ohio river, by a runaway horse. Mrs. Pilens and her mother received frightful injuries, and both will probably die. An infant child was also dangerously hurt. The others escaped with slight injuries. The horse was scared by a train.

Cotton Crop Injured.
MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 26.—The continued heavy rains, lasting over two weeks, which terminated ten days ago, followed by a drought and excessively hot weather, have seriously damaged the cotton crop in this section, and unless we have rain within the next week a great deal of the product will be rendered almost worthless.

Dashed Out His Life.
MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 26.—At Oak and a colored boy aged 10 years named George Smith had a fight with a little white boy. This enraged the father, John Feathers, who came up at the moment, that he picked up the young Negro and dashed him to the ground, killing him instantly. The murderer made his escape.

Ordered to Honduras.
WASHINGTON, July 26.—The secretary of the navy has ordered the United States steamer Keenawake to proceed at once to Honduras. That country is in a state of revolution, and the presence of a United States man-of-war is thought necessary to protect American interests there.

Murder Will Out.
CHICAGO, July 26.—After a two years' search the murderer of Mary Anderson at Perth Amboy, N. J., has been captured in the person of Morris Berg, he being positively identified Monday by one of the boys whom he chased from the scene of the crime.

EDWARD TREAST, 21 years old, certainly old enough to know better, who lives in Covington, rode a pony to Coney Island Sunday. Because the animal would not go as fast as he wanted it to go he stabbed it with a knife. He was arrested—and he ought to be given a dose of his own medicine.

THERE are some as loud-mouthed anarchists in Maysville as can be found anywhere. They never did have, and never will have, anything themselves, and they do not want anybody else to have a few hundred dollars, no matter how hard they toiled to make and save them. It is about time these fellows were given a set-back.

THE Japanese are a cleanly people in many respects. They are fond of bathing. In the city of Tokio there are over 800 public bath-houses, in which a person can take a bath, hot or cold, for a sum equal to one cent. Most of the Japanese prefer warm baths, and very likely this is the reason why their complexions are usually smooth, clear and spotless.

IN the White House mail several days after Mr. Blaine's resignation there came a letter from Iowa. The writer said that he saw that J. G. Blaine, Secretary of State, had resigned, and he would like to know what duties were required of the Secretary and how much the wages were. If the salary was satisfactory and the labors not too arduous the writer—named Roberts by the way—wanted to make application for the job. He thought he would make a pretty good Secretary of State.

NEGLECTED GRAVES.

The Resting Place of Over Twenty-five Hundred Confederate Soldiers.

Adjutant General Pocock of Ohio is just now making an investigation into the history of a little plot of ground about 140 feet wide and some 500 or 600 feet long, which lies about five miles West of the Statehouse. In that small strip, which is enclosed by a stone wall nearly five feet high, lie buried 2,200 men who were captured on Southern battlefields and were sent to Camp Chase, near Columbus, to suffer confinement as prisoners of war. It is a lonely place, this, situated on a by-road, among fields that are golden with the ripened grain, and where little save the twittering of the birds breaks the solemn silence of death. A few scanty trees give a precarious shade and the long uncut grass lies matted on the ground over the graves of these hundred of brave men sleeping the eternal sleep so far from the homes of their childhood, their friends and their kin. The place is absolutely neglected and deserted. The single iron gate that breaks the continuity of the stone wall is fastened and covered with the undisturbed rust of years. Twenty-five feet beyond it, in the center of the cemetery, is a granite boulder some five or six feet through, on which is carved in sunken letters:

2,200 Confederate Soldiers of the War 1861-1865 Buried in this Inclosure.

There are but three other marking stones. One bears this inscription:

J. D. Newsom, 20th Alabama Regiment, Company D.

It is a modest little stone less than two feet high, on which the storms have not yet made visible their effacing force, but it is plainly neglected, possibly unthought of.

Over in the extreme Western end of the inclosure is another small stone, almost hidden by the long grass, on which appears:

GEORGE HANNEY, Born, Livermore, Ky., July 24th, 1839. Died, October 23d, 1863.

But one other stone marks the grave of another gallant fighter for a principle, and it is notable that the name of the unfortunate who lies beneath is not given on it. Why cannot be guessed. Like the others, this stone is small. It stands just at the left of the entrance gate, shaded by a towering elm, whose swaying limbs stretch out over many another grave, and the lettering is this:

Ordinance Sergeant Third Mississippi Battery, Residence, Asuka, Miss. Died January 16th, 1865. Aged 37 Years. Erected by his Wife.

Two thousand two hundred and fifty-seven graves here are not even marked! They cannot be distinguished in any way. The ground above all has sunken to one common level. More than 2,200 men, once radiant with hope and strong with courage, eager for valorous deeds, who went forth to battle, lie mingling their dust with that of a land they hated in life, and it takes a long search to obtain any information as to who they were, where they came from or anything else about them. Indeed, it is not sure that any information can be obtained. There is none in Columbus among the stay documents, indeed, nothing so much as to show to whom the ground belongs. A protracted inquiry has failed to discover anyone who has any knowledge of the burial ground and of the men in it. The relatives and friends of the poor fellows have forgotten them, and pay no more heed to them if they had never lived—or died. Forsaken and forgotten they lie in their unnumbered graves, a silent but terrible reproach to the living who will not even pay them the poor tribute of memory.

ONE must always go away from home to hear what is going on. This is from The Ashland News: "Maysville tore up her streets, that had not been molested for fifteen years, to put down mains for fuel gas. When the mains were in they found their gas was simply wind, and would not burn. Fuel gas stock can now be bought there cheap."

THE Philadelphia Inquirer has inaugurated a novel and certainly interesting department. Stories of the late rebellion and how it was put down never cease to interest, and The Inquirer has certainly hit upon an excellent method of presenting these stories. Every day it reproduces from its own files a telegraphic dispatch giving the news of some great event of the rebellion. It is safe to say that these dispatches are read with as much interest as any of the columns of the issues in which they appear, and no doubt are perused by more readers than read them upon their first appearance thirty years ago.

A CLOUD-BURST.

Father, Wife, Grandmother and Three Children Carried Away.

The Family Were Surprised by the Water While Asleep.

Washout on the Ohio River Railroad at Proctor, W. Va., Causes a Fatal Wreck.—Passengers and Hails Will Be Delayed For Several Days.

WHEELING, W. Va., July 26.—Monday morning when residents of the vicinity of Long Run, a stream which flows through Wetzel county into Fish creek, awoke, they were astonished to find that two houses on the creek bottom had been washed away in the night. There was only a comparatively slight storm there, and it is supposed the flood was the result of a cloud burst further up the stream. Fences, bridges and outbuildings had also disappeared, but the water had subsided to its normal stage, from which fact it is inferred that the damage was done about midnight.

It was found that the family occupying one of the two houses demolished had all escaped, and taken refuge in an abandoned tobacco house on the hill.

The other house was occupied by Dan Doty, his wife and three children, Doty's father and mother and Mrs. Doty's mother. No sign of them could be found for some time. At length the body of Doty was found at the mouth of the creek and a little later that of one of the children was discovered lodged in the branches of a fallen tree about a mile and a half below the place where the house stood.

There can be no doubt that all the inmates of the house were surprised by the angry waters while asleep and all perished. Lightning Sunday night and Monday morning early destroyed three barns and badly damaged five houses in this vicinity.

The flood washed out a long, high trestle on the Ohio river railroad, at Proctor, thirty-six miles down the river, and at half past three Monday morning a freight train of twenty-nine loaded cars was precipitated into the deep ravine, and all demolished. Engineer Reasley had a leg cut off. Passengers and mails will have to be transferred around the wreck for several days.

MILLION DOLLAR FIRE.

Thirty Blocks Destroyed at Bay City, Mich.—Loss of Life.

BAY CITY, Mich., July 26.—Fire broke out at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon in the lumber manufacturing establishment of Miller & Turner, situated on west side, Water street, at the foot of Twenty-ninth street. A brisk southwest wind was blowing at the time, which fanned the flames into a roaring conflagration and swept them across Water street into the settled district.

At five o'clock about thirty blocks had been burned over, while twenty more were supplying fresh fuel to the devouring element. When the chief of the fire department first realized the extent of the danger he telegraphed to Saginaw, Flint and Detroit for assistance. Saginaw and Flint responded, each city sending an engine and quantities of hose. Nearly all of West Bay City's equipment came to the scene of disaster, and lent such assistance as lay in the power of the firemen.

At 9 p. m. many rumors are afloat concerning people who have perished. So far as is positively known only one death has occurred, that of a woman whose name it is impossible to learn. She lay sick in one of the houses which were destroyed. Before assistance could reach her the dwelling was a seething mass of fire, and the poor creature had to be left to her fate. It is also reported that two children were burned to death, but the story lacks confirmation. Miller & Turner, on whose premises the fire started, lost about $150,000, mostly covered by insurance. The entire loss will reach upwards of $1,000,000, but it is impossible to learn the extent to which different parties are insured.
